

Appendix 1: A microscopic section of a carotid body paraganglioma of a 42-year-old man. The section shows multiple clustered nests (arrows) of chief cells, called zellballen, surrounded by a thin rim of sustentacular cells in a fibrovascular stroma (hematoxylin–eosin, original magnification $\times 400$).

